NEWS OF THE BALL FIELD, RACE TRACK AND PRIZE RING.

Continuing the Trotting Meeting at Bennings A Rig Crowd and Good Racing-Washington's Easy Victory The Myers-Hopper Mill,

The meeting of the Washington Driving Club at Bennings was continued this afternoon under as auspicious circumstances as the initial meeting yesterday. The weather was all that could be desired and the track was in excellent condition. The crowd was large and enthusiastic and the racing all that could be desired, and showed a satisfactory increase over that of yesterday. There were only two races on the card to-day, both trotting, for horses of the 2:23 class. The entries were first class and the sport all that could be desired. The following are the entries:

The following are the entries:

getting second place. The meeting of the Dumblane Hunt Club commences to-morrow at Ivy City. and from the character of the entries and the interest that is taken in this popular club's meetings it will be the social event of the season. There will be five races to-morrow, including a steeplechase and a hurdle race. The Marine band has been engaged for the

The Washington Club yesterday de-feated the Jersey City team for the second time, or rather it was presented with the game by that organization through its numerous and costly errors. It outbatted the local team, two to one, out its hits were so scattered, and the fielding of the Washingtons so sharp, that the heavy batting did not amount to anything. The Washingtons played a spirited game, taking advantage of every hit and error, while the visitors played like amatures, and it was only towards the last of the game that they made sny effort to pull down the long lead. Burdock especially played a care-less game, and the defeat is due in a great measure to the bad example he set.

Gleason and Hill did some excellent playing in the field and O'Brien and Maloney at the bat. Umpire Corcoran very properly fined Roussy, who, when he was put out, persisted in running up and down the base line and confusin the players of both sides, who thought he was the base-runner. His little trick did not succeed, and it cost him a sawbuck for indulging in it.

To day the strong Worcester Club will play here beginning the last series on the home grounds before the team goes away on its first trip. Stafford and Wilson will be the battery for the visitors and McCoy and Riddle for the Washingtons. It will also be ladies' day, and ladies will be admitted free. The game ought to be an interesting one, for the Worcesters are the champions of the Association and are playing

An important meeting of the Atlantic Association was held in Philadelphia to consider the question of paying the fees for protection under the national agreement. The Association adopted a resolution asking a meeting of the board of arbitration to decide she cases of Pitz and Pettit. Messrs. Shoemaker, Burnham and Hewett were appointed to lay this matter before Secretary Young. The action of the Association would indicate that it does not believe it is securing the protection it is entitled to, and that unless it gets justice it will kick over the traces. Unless the $2,000 is paid by to-morrow the clubs will lose the privilege of reservation. Still, it is fighting for a principle, and sooner than lose such an important league the national agreement clubs will undoubtedly recede from the position they have taken and allow the Atlantic Association to retain the two men to whose services it believes itself justly en-

Here is a suggestive comparison: Attendance at the Players' League games, 6,267; National League, 10,752. How long will it last?

The Pittsburg Players' club has reduced its admission to twenty-five cents, and yet only 700 people took advantage of it. In a city that is the hot bed of trades unionism, and where it was expected the working men would rally to the support of the "oppressed" players, it seems strange that that club should he the first to weaken. And yet it is only a question of time when the other clubs will do the same. Ward's team in Brooklyn is not drawing flies, yet is is the only club that is doing anything at all, and even it is not drawing sufficiently to pay its high-priced team. Verily, the Players' League at the very outset of its career has fallen upon evi times, and the day of its annihilation cannot be much longer postponed.

The Myers Hopper ten-round glove contest will take place in Alexandria to night. All the arrangements have heen completed and the "go" promises to be a lively one. Jack Hopper has been training daily for some weeks and is in excellent condition, while Myers is in good trim, having been in training for his fight with Bowen, which comes off one week from to-day in New Orleans. To night's contest will be with small gloves and both men will undoubtedly do their best. Hopper's friends in this city are confident of his ability to stand in front of Myers for the allotted num ber of rounds and make a game fight of it. The train will leave the Sixth Street Station at 8 o'clock, returning at 10:80 o'clock. Manager Chency has offered $25 to any boxer whom Ed. Myers or Link Pope cannot best in four rounds; conceiling ten pounds in weight. As there are a number of local men who have abundant confidence in themselves, there ought to be sufficient sport outside of the big mill to make the evening an entertaining one to those who like that kind of sport.

At Jimmy Mitchell's benefit at Phil adelphia last night, the beneficiary kneeked out Jack Hanley in the first

The local fighters are keeping very quiet. Reidy has not yet issued his contemplated challenge to Northedge, nor has McMillan made another effort to get a match on with the victor of last week's mill. The backers of Young and Fielden have not been able to arrange a fight between those two, nor is it likely they will, so the only fight in prospect for the near future is that be-tween the Pearl and Murgen, which

AN INTERESTING REPORT, Major Powell Sets Forth Interesting

Data Regarding Irrigation. Major Powell, Director of the Geological Survey, in his first annual report of the operations of the Irrigation Survey, just made public, presents a brief history of the origin of the survey and a great deal of interesting data about this great work, which is only fairly begun

The area of the arid region, the re-port states, is about 1,300,000 square miles, one-third of the entire country. Of this area there can be economically reclaimed by irrigation within the pres ent generation at least 150,000 square miles, an empire one-half as large as entire area now cultivated in the United States. Irrigated, this land would be worth not less than $30 an acre, adding $2,880,000,000 to the wealth of the nation.

The topographic work consisted of surveys delineating the topographic features of the country, the areas of all drainage basins, the courses of streams. the situation of lakes, springs and other bodies of water; the positions of possible reservoir sites, the location of dams and canal lines, and the altitude, position and general character of all irrigable lands.

The hydraulic and engineering work consisted of the measurements of rain-fall and the study of general meteorology; measurement of river-flow, evaporation and matter carried in suspension by water; the ascertainment of the duty of water, and the determination of the mode and cost of construction of dams and canals and of the areas and contents of reservoirs.

BIG BEN LE FEVRE

Thinks Farmers Could Make Money if They'd Manage Better.

From the New York Star. Among a number of Onto statesmen I found the other evening General Ben Le Fevre, who spent about ten years in Congress and was the devoted friend of late Samuel J. Randall. He also took the distinguished Pennsylvanian's view of economic questions, and voted for protection whenever the opportunity offered. The subject of the condition of our agricultural interests was being discussed when General Le Fevre said "I don't take much stock in this constant talk about the poverty of the farmers. There are other interests in this country that need attention quite as much. The fact is that one of the troubles with the husbandmen of this country is that they over farm. Instead of cultivating a few acres of land well they want to half till a very large acreage. I have a farm near Circleville, Ohio, and make money off it every year, and I have constantly pursued I have a farm near Circleville, the policy of renting to my tenants small tracts, and then see that they cultivate them to the limit. One of the most serious difficulties is that the young people who are raised in an agriculture community want to live be yond their means and put on a style that the average farm cannot carry, and it is very difficult any longer to get an American boy who is willing either to till the soil or learn a trade. He wants to dress at the top of the fashion, and then go visiting. Of course, we have some evils which affect the farmer to his detriment; but the laws are less to blame for the present depression than many other things, which the agriculturist himself can remedy.

> The Passing of Halstead From the St. Louis Republic.

The Republic has been trying hard to doubt the reports of the rupture between Murat Halstead and the stockholders of the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette, but there seems to be no longer room for doubt. The stockholders have made Mr. Halstead a scapegoat for the his party in the Ohio camp of forgery. He has gone. Cincinnati journalism will know him no more. His trenchant shrick of exacerbated partisanship will no more be heard, far forward, rallying the statwarts of Ohio to the onset. The gray goose quills which winged the shafts he hurled, as if they were levin bolts from the red right band of a far-thundering Zeus, will be left to draggling decay in the puddles of Ohio politics. For Halstead has gone—gone East—where all is effete, prosaic and commonplace.

Hair on the Free List.

From the St. Paul Figneer Press. Who is the woman in the case? Her name is at present withheld from the public, but she lives in Wisconsin. hurriedly leaving Germany she inad-vertently left her hair on the dressing case, sent over for it by the next steamer and was obliged to pay a heavy duty on the same. Hence the appearance of her fine Italian hand in the new tariff bill now before Congress, in which human hair is relegated to the free list.

Silent Benjamin. From the St. Louis Republic

President Harrison has not yet made public answer to the letter in which Henry C. Lea, the well-known Philadelphia publisher, asks him why he ows his administration to be trolled by Quay, nor has he offered any evidence to explain the hushing up of the scandal in which Quay was involved as treasurer of Pennsylvania. Like most other Republicans, Mr. Harrison prefers to talk about some other treasury, when the Pennsylvania State treasury is mentioned.

Not Up in the Favorite Argument,

From the Boston Transcript.
Some carpet manufacturers of Philadelphia told the House Committee on Ways and Means that the proposed increase of the duty on carpet wools would make the raw material for ingrain carpet cost more than the carpets now sold for in the open market. These manufacturers have yet to be inducted into the philosophy of this style of leg-islation, that "the higher the duty the lower will be the price to consumers.

AN OLD FIREMAN'S VIEWS.

suggestions as to Saving Life at Fires and Fire-Escapes, The sad catastrophe which occurred in Washington on the Morning of February 3, by which three lives were lost and two escaped with severe injuries. uggests the idea that if fire escapes had been on the building one life would have probably been saved and two others might have escaped unharmed, says William Duncan in the Detroit Free Press, From a statement published in our papers it might be inferred that Miss Tracy, while groping her way through the ball, reached the head of the stairs, whence she encountered a denser volume of smoke coming u wards, which suffocated and caused h to fall to the floor. Had there been fire escapes on the house it is very likely she would have attempted to reach one and would probably have been successful, as the further she went from the main stairway the less oppressive would have been the smoke. It is rarely that a fine residence is burned, but when a fire does occur it nearly always ignites in the basement or first floor; then, if it gains headway it pours into the stairways and halls as there is always a draft in them, and the inmates first seek that way of es-

In view of the foregoing, I would suggest that the owners of costly homes place fire escapes upon them. If made ornamental and put on the sides or rear they would in no way detract from the appearance of the building.

The residents of cities should always remember that if their lives are endangered in their homes by fire speedy relief will soon reach them, for the efficiency of the fire departments in our cities enables the members to reach a fire with their appliances and get into service in from three to five minutes after an alarm is given, which is ample time in 90 cases in 100 to save the lives of the inmates of a burning building, if they can be reached. If a person is aroused at night by the smell of smoke or cry of fire in a burning building and finds breathing difficult by reason of the former, if the fire is not in the same room, he may readily conclude that it is much thicker in the halls and stairways, and to attempt to escape by them would be hazardous, and might be attended with fatal results.

The safest way would be to go to the nearest window, open it (this would give fresh air), and continue to shout loudly for help until it comes. Some minutes would clapse, which would seem an age, and occasion terrible anxiety of mind, for it would be death if persons thus endangered remained in the building, and almost as sure death they jumped to the ground. It would be almost certain that the firemen, with their clear, cool heads and rapidity of action, would come to their

It would not be wise to leap from a window, unless the fire had approached so near as to ignite the clothing, for in almost every case it is attended with some injuries or loss of life.

I know from personal knowledge that any one finding himself in a burning building, in a suffocating smoke, had better get down on his hands and knees and crawl to the nearest door or window than remain upright, for the smoke is much less dense near the floor than five or six feet above.

It would be a wise precaution if every woman in city and country would have in her bed-room at all times, within easy reach, a thick woolen shawl or cloak. It might be used in case of fire by throwing over the head and securing it tightly around the body. and if she had an infant child, inclos it within the shawl. The benefit would be that the woolen garment would not ignite as readily as cotton, and in the time gained their lives might be saved. and one might rush through a mod-erate flame without being burned to death. Men sometimes might save their lives under the same circumstances if they would put on a hat, draw it well down over the face, and put on a coat and button it up tight. The promptness of firemen in rescu-ing people whose lives are endangered does not lessen the necessity of fire escapes, for when placed on dwellings the inmates, knowing their location, would, in case of fire, rush to them for safety, unless the passages were too full of smoke, when they should go to the nearest window, from which they could be rescued.

I believe the officials of fire departments will sustain the recommendations that are here made with reference to fire escapes and the manner in which people can help themselves in case of fire, and also indorse what I have claimed that firemen can do in the way of saving life when endangered by the same element. The writer has well studied this subject. The conclusions reached are drawn from an experience acquired in serving as an active fireman of the old volunteer fire department of this city for twenty vears. Beauty is Not Imparted by the Best perfumery, but least of all plain women should forego the alluring charm of ATRINSON'S Extracts or Sachets.

THE REVENUE MARINE SERVICE An Experienced Sea Captain Tells of

Its Difficulties and Dangers. Frem the New York Star. Captain Job E. Grierson ought to know something about maritime affairs. For over forty years, twenty-six of them as commander of a ship, he has sailed the ocean. Talking, a few days since, on the steamship Nevada, he said: "I see Congress is debating about transferring the revenue cutter service from the Tressury to the Navy Department; but I don't think it will be done. The general public knows very little about the revenue cutter marine.

"The officers in this service are sim-ply what are called in England smuggling officers. They are to aid the Treasury Department in the collection the revenue. The service consists of about thirty-six vessels, some of which are very small. I think there are thirty six of them now, that they call vessels, commanded by a lieutenant or some other commanding officer. They are merely local boats in their character and action. They are confined to cer-tain ports, the men being familiar with the localities wherein they operate. Some few of these vessels are sent from place to place. For instance, the Grant, the leading ship, is sometimes sent along the whole coast to inspect and examine into the service. But the work of each vessel is mainly local in character, and the duties performed are largely connected with the coast. They rarely ever go outside fifty miles.

"In the ordinary cruise a revenue-marine vessel would never go beyond that distance except in case of war, when they are liable to be transferred to active service, and when they are so transferred they are officered by men raised to the business, not educated like naval officers, but raised to perform that particular service. When transferred, I believe," continued the captain, "they have a school in New Lon-don, Conn., where officers are trained for the revenue marine, and they ough to be well trained, for their service is far more dangerous and valuable than that of the pavy in time of peace. They are in continual warfare with the elements, and the history of the revenue marine is one of the most valuable, one of the most interesting and one of the most dangerous in this country. They save wreeks, they go winter or summer, in storm or sunshine, and when a storm rages they are sent out to protect life They frequently make a rescue as val-uable as does the Life Saving Service.

"The very character of the work has rendered the officers of the revenue marine and the seamen engaged in it the very best coast guard in the world. The most arduous duty that a seaman is ever called upon to perform is upon the coast near the breakers, near the reefs and shoals, which it requires skill and watchfulness and seamanship to avoid. The seaman who seeks the safest place known to his profession sails on the high seas, in mid-ocean thereby avoiding the dangers which are everywhere near the coast. from the very necessity of the case, the officers and sailors of this service have become most skillful seamen and the most experienced of coast pilots."
